Historical Background and Development

The origins of the Herbarium de France trace back to the 17th and 18th centuries, a period marked by burgeoning scientific inquiry and natural history collection. French botanists, including pioneers like Joseph Pitton de Tournefort and André Michaux, laid the groundwork for systematic plant collection and classification. Over time, these efforts coalesced into a formalized herbarium aimed at cataloging France's native and exotic plant species.

The herbarium has evolved through various institutional affiliations, notably becoming part of the National Museum of Natural History (Muséum national d'Histoire naturelle) in Paris. This institutional backing has ensured the preservation, expansion, and scientific utilization of the collection, transforming it into a vital resource for botanists, ecologists, and conservationists worldwide.

Scope and Contents of the Collection

The Herbarium de France encompasses over one million plant specimens, including:

- Vascular plants (angiosperms and gymnosperms)
- Fungi (though less emphasized)
- Algae and lichens (in some collections)

The specimens are meticulously pressed, dried, and mounted on herbarium sheets, often accompanied by detailed labels indicating:

- Scientific name
- Collection date and location
- Collector's name
- Habitat description
- Additional notes on morphology or ecological context

This comprehensive documentation renders the herbarium a vital repository of botanical diversity, both past and present.
